SQUIRE ABINGTON DEAD

Pneumonia Conquers the Englishman
Who Backed Mitchell.

WILL NOT STOP THE FIGHT

Mitchell and Corbett Hear of the Event With Sorrow—The Remains to Be Shipped to England.

NEW ORLEANS, March 18.—George A. Baird, better known as "Squire Abington," friend and companion of the English pugilist, Charlie Mitchell, died here this morning. His death created something of a sensation here, as it had not leaked out he was so seriously ill. When the "Squire" came here from New York with the Hall and Mitchell party, he was in the very best of spirits and splendid health, with quick elastic step and bright ruddy face. He came in excellent condition for a long stay, engaged the best rooms in the hotel, began to open wine immediately for all whom he took a liking, and spent money right and left for wine and women. He found New Orleans very fast in a sporting sense, and cut out a pace that was too swift for all who were with him except Hall.

On the night of the fight he was selected to go into the corner with Hall, not because he was thought to know much about handling a man, but simply for the honor of having been in the corner. He wore nothing but a loose undershirt as did the other seconds. It was rather warm during the early part of the evening, but before the fight began it had changed considerably and there were many dangerous draughts whirling through the big pine building. The "Squire" handled the ice and bottles in the corner and made himself generally useful until the fight was over and Hall had been taken back to his room. After the defeated pugilist had been escorted back to the hotel the entire party went out for a lark, and a general round of dissipation was begun then, in which Jim Hall and the "Squire" played the leading parts, and which did not end until the "Squire" broke down and had to go to bed.

His illness at first was not considered serious and was regarded merely as a cold resulting from dissipation. However, a physician was called in and the sick man given every possible attention. He, himself did not believe he was very bad off, and was so confident he would be up in a day or two to go east, he insisted Mitchell should start on ahead of him for New York, the western trip with Bat Masterson having been abandoned. Mitchell left with Hall, and the "Squire" expected to meet him in time to sail on the Majestic Wednesday. The Majestic will carry back to England Wednesday the dead body of the "Squire" and his sorrowing friends.

It was not until the dispatch came here from Buffalo to the effect that Mitchell received word that the "Squire" was dying that any faith was placed in the rumors current on the streets yesterday evening that the "Squire" was on the point of death. Dr. Fitch had originally been called in to attend the "Squire," but when he continued to grow worse, Dr. Miles, the distinguished surgeon and physician of the Charity hospital, was summoned for consultation. At that time the "Squire" was delirious, violent, and had to have with him constantly some one to prevent him from doing himself violence.

After a consultation between Dr. Miles and Dr. Fitch a telegram was sent east that the sick man was suffering with pneumonia, and that his recovery, despite his splendid constitution, was regarded improbable. During all his illness his secretary, Teddy Bailey, and his valet, William Monk, remained constantly with him, and he was given every attention that money could procure in the matter of trained nurses and scientific care. During the night the condition of the patient continued to grow worse, and, despite the unremitting attention the physician and nurses gave him, when daylight broke his death became only a question of a few hours. Sinking slowly death finally occurred at 8 o'clock. He had been ill but a week.

Last night Charley Mitchell telegraphed here he would come back at once to the "Squire," and would reach here Monday morning. He was then in New York. This morning he was in New York. The "Squire," not yet cold when word was sent on to Mitchell announcing the death of his friend, and arresting his proposed journey south. Telegrams were also immediately sent to various points in the east and to New York, and cablegrams to his family in England, consisting of mother, sister, and cousin. Replies were received from over the water placing all arrangements in the hands of Secretary Bailey, who, with Dr. Fitch as a guide, started forth at once to carry out the wishes of the family of the dead man. Undertaker Johnson was sent for, and at 9:30 a van drove up to the hotel and the body was removed to the funeral director's, where it is now being embalmed. Bailey secured transportation for himself and valet and body over the Piedmont air line and will leave with the remains for New York this evening.

A DELIGHTFUL BANQUET

The Entertainment of the Irish-American Club Friday Night.

TOASTS, MUSIC AND GAIETY

Eloquent Responses From Prominent Speakers—Some of the Things That Were Said.

BUTTE, March 18.—Those who attended the banquet of the Irish-American club last night are unanimously of the opinion that it was the greatest event ever held in the city. There were about 200 or 250 of the leading citizens of Butte present, besides many visitors from Anaconda, Deer Lodge and other places. The decorations were exceedingly tasteful and attractive, general admiration, even in the club rooms which needed no decoration. The banquet was an elaborate affair. From midnight until 3 o'clock speech making was the order of the day, and there was never an occasion of the kind in Butte where there were more good speeches delivered of a character that created more than a passing impression. Unfortunately the speechmaking began too late in the night for full reports to be made in the morning papers.

Major J. E. Dawson made a witty and graceful toastmaster. John Caplice, president of the club, made the opening speech in welcome of the guests. He elaborated on the mistaken idea that exists in some circles that the Irishman is clannish and selfish. On the contrary, he is always ready to mingle with all nationalities and to establish social and friendly relations with all classes of people. Mr. Caplice's address was scholarly and dignified, and he read many extracts from various authors in support of his speech. His words of welcome to the guests were apt.

John Maguire excelled even himself in his remarkably stirring response to the toast, "The Day We Celebrate." It was a masterpiece of eloquence, delivered with such an evident sincerity and such heartfelt emotion, that the sentences brought the tears to the eyes of many present. John Maguire's oration will be long remembered.

The response of Judge DeWolfe to the toast, "The President of the United States," was a very able and masterly review of the presidential administration, delivered in the graceful and dignified style which render the judge's speeches so pleasing to the listener. It was the subject which brought from Colonel O'Leary of Anaconda one of his most earnest and eloquent efforts. Hon. A. F. Bray responded to the toast, "The State of Montana." The speech was impressive, yet it was one of the hits of the evening. The speaker expressed the utmost confidence in Montana's future greatness and he summarized the elements of greatness in the state in a concise yet complete manner, that instructed and at the same time delighted the audience.

The response of Judge J. J. McCallister to the toast, "The Judiciary," was a thoughtful, profound effort, that was listened to with closest attention. Thomas F. Courtney responded to the toast "The City of Butte," in his characteristically pleasing and easy style. He spoke of the importance of proper men for city officers, considering it of the greatest importance to the people of the city to have good men at the head of the city government than of the national government.

"Our Guests" was the last, which called forth a graceful and pleasing response from Dr. F. E. Specimen of Anaconda. In the course of his remarks the doctor suggested the importance of the sons of Ireland retaining knowledge of the Irish language, and occasionally conversing with each other in that language as is done by the Germans and French in this country. "The Press" and "The Ladies" were other toasts that were appropriately responded to.

Michael Caplice delivered a very effective oration on "Irish Orators," devoting much of his time to an estimate of Edmund Burke's character and abilities. He concluded that Burke had no peer. He was clearly first. Mr. Caplice delivered several recitations in very clever style in substantiation of his claim of Burke's standing as an orator. J. H. McQueeney made a personal address to the club in which he made several excellent suggestions for the club's future welfare. The speeches were interspersed by music by the orchestra and singing by Dr. Spelman and Messrs. Mahoney, Conney, Needham, Kane and others.

The party broke up at 3 o'clock after one of the most thoroughly enjoyable nights ever spent in Montana.

Handkerchiefs, 3,000 of them, all white, all linen, hemstitched; some with colored borders embroidered, worth 25 and 75 cents each, to be sold on Monday and Tuesday at M. J. Connell's for 15 and 25 cents each.

Blouse and shirt waists in all styles and materials are popular again this spring. See Courtenay, Case & Gravelle Co.'s line before you purchase.

The Guarantee Watch company gives away free one-half dozen Rogers Bros. 1847 timepieces with every watch.

Street suits for spring wear, as well as spring wraps are shown in plenty at Courtenay, Case & Gravelle Co.'s.

Special sale in children's dresses today at Kahlweiler's.
